Vietnamese Refugees Reflect

McChord Air Force Base, Washington -- It's beeing slightly more than a year since the fall of South Vietnam and thousands of refugees fled the dangers of the advancing Viet Cong forces.

Many of those refugees came to America and the Pacific Northwest to start new lives. One such family is that of SrA Yen K. Smith, she was previously of the 25th Air Division and has left recently for an assignment in Alaska.

Airman Smith and her husband, SSgt. Justin D. Smith, of the 318th Fighter Interceptor Squadron, spent several weeks a year ago trying to locate Yen's family and coordinate all the sponsorship efforts during the confusion in Vietnam, to help them get to America.

Battling the bureaucratic entanglements her family finally made it to Camp Pendleton and eventually to Tacoma.

Airman Smith's mother, father, sister, brother and sister-in-law have now been on their own living in the Tacoma area for several months and are getting acquainted with the American way of life.

"One of the first things we did to help my family get settled was to get them enrolled in English classes. All of them now can communicate in English all though at times it is still a little difficult," explained Airman Smith.

As her mother rattles off a line of Vietnamese, Airman Smith translates, "My mother said she likes to speak English except she is afraid someone will laugh at her." She then turned to her mother and answered in Vietnamese. "I just told her that we just might laugh at her English but don't we laugh at some Americans when they try to speak Vietnamese she chuckled.

"My family has made a pretty good transition into the American society," she said boastfully. "My father is enrolled in a chef's class, my brother is in an auto mechanics class and my sister will be a senior at Clover Park High School this year," she pointed out.

When asked about who does the cooking around the home her father replied, "My wife cooks the oriental food and I cook the American food for our family," he said choosing his words carefully.

After completing the chef's course her father plans to enroll in a restaurant management course before seeking full time employment.

Her brother also has plans after his auto mechanics course. He has hopes of becoming a computer programmer at which he gained a little experience while working at a bank in South Vietnam.

The training for these jobs will provide the family with a steady income while they pursue their other goals. Prior to coming to America, Airman Smith's father was a customs inspector and tax auditor in South Vietnam and this is the career he would like to pursue.

When they left Vietnam, each family member was only able to escape with one suitcase of possessions. Now that the family has established themselves in an apartment, posses a car, and have become familar with famous hamburger institutions they have become "Americanized."

"America is a good country," said the father, "there is more equality among the people, one has the opportunity to get ahead and government provides help for the poor. When we left Vietnam, you couldn't get a good job unless you were of the right family and if you were poor, it was just to bad, no one cared."

The parents say they are happy to be here and are very thankful to the American people for the help they have given them.

"The atmosphere in the ward and the attitude of patients are both improved as a result of the design and decorating project," both Mrs. Beauchamp and Assistant Director Taylor declared.

THE UNEMPLOYMENT CRISIS

The greatest crisis in the United States is unemployment. Unemployment in the last three months is officially 7.8 per cent, but this does not include those who have exhausted their unemployment benefits or have given up looking for work.

Unemployment is not only devastating to the individual and his family, but is a loss to the nation. Unemployed workers are a drain on the economy, drawing unemployment compensation or welfare. Unemployment also means loss of production with the accompanying loss of circulation of dollars. Unemployed workers to not pay taxes, so all levels of government suffer.

Like every piece of social legislation since the Roosevelt era, the Humphry-Hawkins bill has been denounced as a boondoggle that would bankrupt the nation. It is called a federal make-work program --- leaning on the shovel. This is not true since two thirds to three-fourths of the jobs created would be in the private sector.

The bill has been called too expensive -- about $12 billion a year. But detractors forget to add that in four years, national production would increase about $275 billion and would add about $36 a year to the federal budget in taxes.

We cannot afford to continue the high rate of unemployment and the accompanying social consequences if the nation is to survive. So when we go to the polls we must think. RIGHT ON!

Informed Consent Form Explains Flu Shots

An "Informed Consent Form" and an information sheet will be furnished to persons getting their swine flu vaccinations this fall.

The form and the information sheet explain what the flu is, the likelihood of an outbreak, and possible vaccine side effects. They also point out special precautions some persons may need to take prior to being vaccinated.

Information sheets on both the bicalent (a combination of swine flu and A-Victoria strains) and monovalent (swine flu only) vaccines will be available to county healtg department clinics and at the offices of some private physicians participating in the program.

Persons being vaccinated will be encouraged to read the information sheet and ask any questions they may have prior to signing the consent form.

Consent forms and information sheets will be available in seven foreign languages for non-English speaking persons.

Bicalent vaccine will be given to persons 57 and older and to persons in a "high-risk" category because of cardiac, respiratory or certain other chronic disorders. The high-risk group includes chronically ill youngsters between the ages of 3 and 18. They will receive two vaccinations, spaced at least four weeks apart. The remainder of the state's population will receive the monovalent vaccine.

Madigan Physicians Present Papers

Two physicians from Madigan Army Medical Center presented papers at the Armed Forces district meeting of the American College of Obstetrics and Gynecology held last week in Las Vegas, Nevada.

Lieutenant Colonel (Dr.) Marshall Matthews, Chief of Madigan's gynecology service, discussed "Colposcopy: Current Concepts and Practices". Major (Dr.) Joseph Robinette, chief of obstetrics, delivered a paper on "Hemodialysis in Treatment of Azotemia during Pregnancy".

The two were among ten obstetricians and gynecologists from the medical center who attended the week long conference that ended September 23rd.

YOUR LIFE INSURANCE

Prepared by the American Society of Chartered Life Underwriters, the national society of life insurance professionals who have earned the C L U designation by meeting high educational, ethical and experience requirements.

Q. The job I've been after for more than a year finally came through. But it will mean my moving to another state. My insurance agent suggested that when I move to have my entire family-financial plan rechecked—including my will and life insurance. I just had this done, do I have to go through all that again?

A. You most certainly should. Local laws differ and you should make certain that legal requirements or provisions have not changed. A move between a community property state and a common law state, for example, will usually call for a complete revamping of your plans. Also, a move such as you plan to make suggests the probability of home ownership changes, tax changes and job changes.

Your insurance program and will and total family-financial-protection plan was presumably set up for a very specific program of fulfillment. It sometimes takes only one or two small changes to throw such a program out of balance. At any rate, inasmuch as a check-up costs you nothing (except possibly an attorney's fee if a new will is needed) why not be certain your financial program is in order?

Southern Poverty Law Center Mounts Drive to Aid 16 Year Old on Death Row

EDITOR'S NOTE: The information below was brought to the attention of THE FACTS by LEO LIPP, who received this letter from the Southern Poverty Law Center, under the presidency of Julian Bond.

" Last year a New Orleans judge sentenced 16-year-old Johnny Ross to die in the electric chair.

Johnny, who is Black, had met with his lawyer only once, briefly, before the trial. The trial lasted one day. The jury took 90 minutes to find him guilty of raping a white woman.

With nowhere else to turn after his conviction, he wrote the Center for help. The enclosed letter is one of the first he sent to us.

I believe that Johnny is innocent and I know he did not receive a fair trial. The Center must respond to his plea for help --

...because he is entitled to a fair hearing to prove his innocence;
...because he is too poor to afford an adequate defense;
...because he is one of the youngest people in the country faced with the slow death of a lifetime in prison. (Louisiana's death penalty is currently suspended due to Supreme Court rulings.)
...and because, as he says in his letter, the adult prison at Angola, Louisiana, is indeed "a very dangerous place for a sixteen year old."

The Center is committed to winning a new trial for Johnny. With your help we can prove his innocence and bring the day closer when racism and poverty no longer interfere with justice.

That is one of the many reasons I feel so strongly about this case, and I wanted you to know Johnny's story and the events that led up to his arrest.

In July 1974, two black men abducted a 25-year-old white woman. They drove her to a deserted warehouse district of New Orleans, where she was raped at gunpoint by both men. Later, they drove her back to the area where they'd first kidnapped her. A witness to the woman's abduction had notified the police, who were now waiting at the scene. A gunfight ensued and the two men escaped. One of the men was described by newspaper accounts as 19 or 20, 5'7" tall and weighing 145 pounds. The other man was described as being 20 or 21, 5'9" tall and 160 pounds.

Johnny stands 5'4" tall, weighs about 130 pounds and was 15 years old at the time.

A little over a week after the crime, the police descended on Johnny's home in the New Orleans ghetto, where he was living with his mother. He went quietly with the police, who at first started to drag off his younger brother.

At a lengthy police line-up, the woman, who is a federal law enforcement officer, had a chance to observe Johnny under bright lights. She stated that no one in the line-up had committed the crime.

Later, the police handed Johnny a confession which they had typed up and demanded that he sign. Johnny, who neither read nor understood the confession, refused to sigh, and finally gave in only after the police beat him severely.

The trial itself was filled with conflicts in testimony. A police officer's description of the culprits and his version of the shoot-out are widely different from the woman's.

In spite of this and other conflicts, the jury took little time to find him guilty and condemn him to death.

Julian Bond
President, Southern Poverty Law Center

WSU to Face Southern Cal in Kingdome

Ricky Bell, the running back that many feel will be the nation's number one draft pick, leads the University of Southern California into The Kingdome for a Saturday night, October 9, encounter with the Washington State Cougars.

Game time is 7:30 o'clock.

The game will be the only regular college contest played in The Kingdome this season and will mark the only appearance of all-america candidate Bell in the Seattle area.

Bell, and his teammates, will present some unique problems for new WSU coach Jackie Sherrill and his young Cougars. The Trojans have lost only one game this year -- an upset at the hands of the University of Missouri. The latter then was upset by Illinois, but came back to shock Ohio State University.

The Cougars have had rough going in the early phases of the current season, but demonstrated they have potential by coming from behind in a near miss to the University of Wisconsin.

Tickets for the USC-Washington State grid clash may prove to be the biggest bargain of the football year. The Cougars have established a "family plan" price of $14 for two adults and four children. General admission tickets are only $4, and half-price for elementary and high school students. Reserved tickets are available at $8.

Bon Marche outlets in Seattle, Northgate, Southcenter, Tacoma and Everett, plus other regular outlets are selling the tickets.

Last--But Not Least Sonics Open Training Camp

Bill Russell and Bob Hopkins greeted a talented group of 22 athletes --14 veterans and eight rookies--with a three day cram course of two-a-day practices to ready them for their first exhibition tilt in Portland against the Golden State Warriors on the 30th. That game will be broadcast live on KOMO Radio (1000) with Bob Blackburn beginning his tenth season at the microphone for Seattle.

A league rule prohibits the start of formal workouts more than 28 days in advance of a team's first game of the regular season. Since the Sonics are the last team in the NBA to begin regular season competition on October 24, they are also the last team to go to camp. Eight teams will begin workouts on Sept. 23, 11 teams start on Sept. 24, two clubs on the 25th and the Sonics trail the pack by another two days.

Mann's Bits and Pieces

by Dave Mann

Who Won the Game?

Overlooking the final score and considering just the statistical point of view, our Seahawks were victorious over the 49ers from San Francisco last Sunday. Coach Patera's struggling outfit won the battle of stats by a one-sided margin: first downs, 29 to 19; net yards, 421 to 381; passing yardage, 305 to 239; punting average, 39.6 to 30.6; pass receptions, 21 to 16. But as they say, the final score is what counts, 49ers 37, Seahawks 21.

To those fans of former Pittsburgh Steeler quarterback Joe Gilliam who have wanted to know his whereabouts: Gilliam is currently in Nashville, Tenn., where he is serving as an "unofficial" quarterback coach at Tennessee State University, his alma mater.

George Atkinson, the Oakland Raiders defensive back who clubbed Pittsburg Steeler receiver Lynn Swann while his back was turned in their game 2 weeks ago, is known around the league as a "cheap shot" artist.

Heavyweight Champion Muhammad Ali may really be growing up. According to some inside sources, Ali says he is growing tired of many of the hangerons who have been around for so many years. If he cuts them loose he will be saving a bundle in the money department.

There are those who are saying that the baseball career of Ferguson Jenkins of the Boston Red Sox may be at an end. Many people feel that a pitcher never gets over an Achilles injury like the one suffered by Jenkins.

While everyone continues to talk about the marvellous age story of George Blanda, recently retired by the Oakland Raiders, little is mentioned of Jim Marshall of the Minnesota Vikings. Marshall, at 38 years of age, is not only starting at defensive end for the Vikings, but is still looked upon as one of the top men in the game at his position. They just don't make that kind anymore.

With O.J. Simpson back with the Buffalo Bills at a salary of over two million dollars for the next three years, it will be interesting seeing how many other members of the Bills are going to be asking to have their salaries renegotiated.

Colorful Luis Tiant of the Boston Red Sox is tired of hearing jokes about his age. Tiant, who is 35, says he thinks he can win in the major leagues until he is 40. "I pitch with my head as much as my arm," Tiant says. "When you do that it makes it easier to stay around longer."

If you ask Otis Armstrong of the Denver Broncos who is the best running back in the NFL, he'll tell you without hesitation, "I'm as good a runner as anyone in the game."

Cowboys Invade Seattle

KIRKLAND, WA --- Dallas' undefeated Cowboys, with red-hot Roger Staubach at the helm, invades Seattle this week to meet the young Seahawks in an NFL game that is expected to draw the first sellout crowd (64,775) to the Kingdome.

Kickoff is at 1 p.m.

Dallas is 3-0 and coming off a 30-27 win over Baltimore in which Staubach passed for 339 yards (22 of 28), his highest single-game total in his eight years with the Cowboys. Staubach has completed 71.8 percent of his passes in this season's three games (56 of 78 for 820 yards and four touchdowns).

"Roger is a fine competitor," said Seahawks Coach Jack Patera today. "He is a proven winner and certainly one of the premier quarterbacks in the league."

Staubach's favorite receivers thus far have been Billy Joe DuPree with 15 catches and Drew Pearson with 13.

"They are a well-coached football team that makes very few errors," Patera said.

Dallas coach Tom Landry, the only coach the Cowboys have had in 17 years in the NFL, will be seeking to become the 6th all-time winningest coach in league history. He will be looking for his 130th win to tie Weeb Ewbank.

Seattle's Jim Zorn, a one-time Cowboy (through the 1975 pre-season) continues to direct the Seahawks offense. Zorn hit on 20 to 43 passes in last Sunday's 37-21 setback at the hands of San Francisco and continues to draw raves from Patera.

"Jim is an outstanding young quarterback who, I thought, had a steady game against San Francisco," Patera said.

The Seahawks' offense ran 80 plays against the 49ers, amassed 29 first downs, rushed for 130 yards, and passed for 305 yards on 20 completions. All were team highs for the season.

Rookie wide receiver Steve Largent, acquired by the Seahawks in a trade with Houston in the pre-season, caught seven passes for the Seahawks for 128 and one touchdown against the 49ers. He's the team leader with 14 receptions for 248 yards, while Ron Howard has 13 catches for 194 yards.

Sunday's game will be carried locally on KIRO, NewsRadio 7, with Pete Gross, Don Heinrich and Wayne Cody, mikeside. The telecasting of the game locally by CBS will be determined by whether or not the game is sold out by 1 p.m. on Thursday.

Arrington to Battle Roman

It's official: Ibar will meet the King in the Coliseum October 12. Ibar Arrington, Seattle's fast rising heavyweight challenger, steps up in class next month when he meets Joe (King) Roman, Ring Magazine's 16th ranked heavyweight contender in a 10-round main event in the Coliseum.

The fight marks two firsts for Arrington: It will be his first appearance in the Coliseum and his first fight against a heavyweight ranked in the top 20. At first glance, it looks as if Ibar might be overmatched. Roman, at 29, a veteran campaigner, has had 68 fights, with 51 wins, 15 losses and two draws. He holds a pair of wins over Jack (the Giant) O'Halloran, a decision and a knockout over Charlie Polite, a decision over Manuel Ramos (then Mexican heavyweight champ) and a decision over Chuck Wepner, now ranked No. 10 in heavyweight ranks. (As a sidelight, Roman also has a win over Jose Urtain. It was Urtain who had the nickname Dale Arrington adopted when he began fighting--Ibar.)

Among his losses, Roman has bowed twice to Pedro Agosta, now #9 among the heavyweights; lost a controversial decision to #8 contender John (Dino) Dennis, and recently lost to Jimmy Young, the #4 challenger for Ali's Crown. In addition, Roman stepped into the ring against then-champ George Foreman in 1973, losing a one-round knockout in Tokyo.

Roman, a Puerto Rico native now fighting out of New York, is a good boxer with quick combination. He bobs and weaves, making himself a difficult target to hit. That he hits with some authority himself is shown in that 26 of his 51 wins have been by knockout.

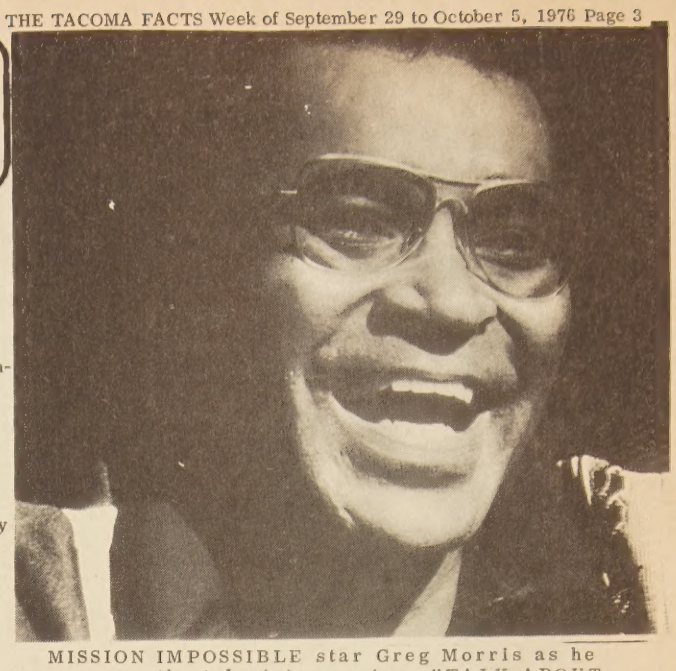
One of the common opponents for the two men is Terry Daniels, who lost 10-round decisions to both. He thinks Ibar is in over his head. "I feel Ibar is being rushed too quickly into this fight," Daniels said. "I'm working with Ibar, so I've seen him in action both in the sparring ring and in the Arena. I have the utmost respect for him. But Ibar is only 23 years old. He's only had 20 orofessional fights. He's got a lot of heart, a lot of courage, but I think Roman has too much experience for him. I feel Roman is too good a boxer, that he has... well, too much class for Ibar."

Ibar the Sailor isn't about to agree with his sparring partner. "I'm ready for Joe Roman. He isn't any King as far as I'm concerned," Ibar said. "I'll take him and then go on. I have confidence in myself and my trainer. I'll be prepared for this fight and I'll take hime."

As for the preparation, Joe Toro said conditioning was the most important factor for Arrington right now. "Ibar will have to keep on top of Roman all the time," Toro said. "He'll have to be throwing combinations from the first round, wear Roman down. Roman can be hard to hit, but I think Ibar's natural style will be to his advantage. Against Al (Memphis) Jones, Ibar fought the fight necessary to win, but it wasn't his natural style. This time he'll be all over his opponent from the opening bell."

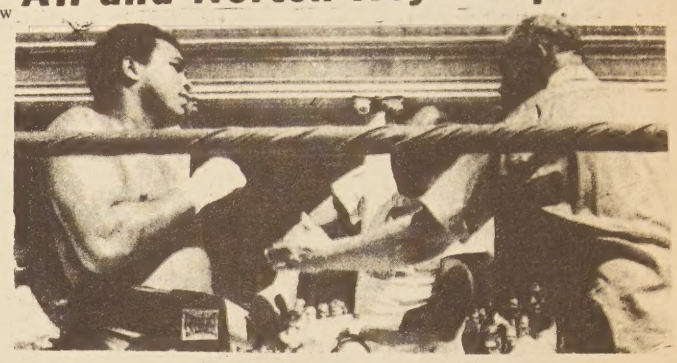
Global Productions, which is promoting the fight, announced that an action-packed undercard will be arranged to support the main event.

Tickets, ranging from $2.50 to a special VIP ringside at $15, are on sale at Fidelity Lane and the usual outlets.



MISSION IMPOSSIBLE star Greg Morris as he appears on the television series, "TALK ABOUT PICTURES." Eastman Kodak Company is sponsoring the weekly series premiering this month in major TV market areas.

Ali and Norton Keyed Up



Heavyweight Champion Muhammad Ali and Ken Norton will have settled their differences by the time our paper hits the streets. But with ex-champ Joe Louis giving pointers and the two fighters hamming it up in New York to sell tickets, I for one will have to go alone with the Nevada gamblers who always say , "Stick with the Champ and count your loot afterwards.

Navy Joins Force With Ibar Oct. 12-9

Ibar the Sailor went home to the sea today.

Heavyweight boxer Ibar Arrington, who received his first recognition as a fighter when he won the All Navy Championship in 1973, went aboard his old ship, the U.S.S. Higbee, today. He presented the Commanding Officer with 2,500 tickets to his October 12th fight at the Seattle Coliseum against Joe "King" Roman.

Tickets will be distributed to Navy personnel throughout the state of Washington. Arrington said it was his way to repay the Navy and his former mates who have always been strong supporters.

The Higbee, by the way, is a destroyer. So is Ibar.

NOT ADDRESSES.

Some people believe home rehabilitation loans and home loans are approved or not approved on the basis of where the house is located.

At First Bank, nothing could be further from the truth.

Because we're making a concerted effort to underwrite and support urban and suburban housing redevelopment in every way we can.

To us, it doesn't make any difference where you live. Or where you want to live.

What does make a difference is whether or not you have the ability to pay the loan back.

Period.

That's just good business. And it's the way we run ours.

STOP THE

INSULATE!

Every time you turn on the heat in your home, heat escapes through the ceiling, walls and floors if your home is not insulated or is poorly insulated. Stop the great escape! Insulate!

Rather than cost you money, good insulation in your home can cut heating costs by as much as fifty percent and can pay for itself in as little as two to three years. Think of the amount of money and energy you will save through the years and the all year round comfort your family will enjoy.

When you do insulate, it is very important to use insulation with adequate "R-Values." The higher the R number of the insulation, the greater its insulating value.

For maximum efficiency, we recommend the following R-Values:
CEILINGS — R-19
WALLS — R-11
FLOORS — R-13

For helpful advice and suggestions on how to insulate your home properly, call our Consumer Service and Conservation Office — 383-2471, extension 274. For Tacoma City Light's free booklet, "Stop the Great Escape," explaining how to insulate your home properly, write to INSULATION, Tacoma City Light, P. O. Box 11007, Tacoma, WA 98411, or call 383-2471, extension 274.

Ford Praises Wilkins' Birthday as Historical Landmark

President Ford last week called Roy Wilkins' seventy-fifth birthday "a landmark in the history of equal rights and equal opportunity in our Society".

The Presidential tribute to the veteran leader of the NAACP came in a letter dispatched to an affair at the New York Hilton. The event honored Wilkins on his 75th birthday and raised funds for the special contributior fund for the NAACP. Vice President Nelson Rockefeller, who attended the glittering event, read the Presidential message.

"Your seventy-fifty birthday is not only a milestone of personal significance to you, your family and friends," the President wrote, "It is a landmark in the history of equal rights and equal opportunity in our society."

The Presidential message, offering "warmest congratulations" to Wilkins, cited his life-long dedication to the well-being of Black Americans which "has earned you not just their affection and respect, but the enduring admiration of countless citizens of this Nation and abroad."

"Thanks to you, the greatest phrase in our Declaration of Independence --that 'all men are created equal' -- rings truer now than ever before in the daily lives of our citizens.", the President wrote Wilkins.

President Ford Signs Child Day Care Bill

President Ford has signed into law a new child day care bill which takes away some of the red tape called for in an earlier bill he sent back to Congress.

At the signing ceremony in the Rose Garden at the White House, the President said that "Insuring an adequate day care bill for children is an important social service. It protects the well-being of thousands of American children and the economic independence of their working parents."

He vetoed the predecessor version of the bill, President Ford told his audience, "not because I disagreed with its goals, but because the bill was the wrong means to a worthwhile end." His veto was sustained by the Congress.

"Today," he remarked, "I signed a new and better child day care bill, the results of cooperation between the Congress and my Administration, and I thank the Members of the Congress for working with the Administration in that regard."

The bill embodies a major compromise on a key issue which led to the original veto. "States and localities", said the President, "will be spared the heavy burden of costly and controversial Federal standards for child day care services."

His veto, the President stressed, "exerted a balancing influence on the deliberations of Congress in this important area. Without this Constitutional check and balance, the original bill might now be law and making day care services more costly to the taxpayer and increasing the Federal intrusion into family life."

The earlier bill would have imposed, effective July 1, 1976, for child day care services funded under Title XX of the Social Security Act. The new law gives day care centers another year to meet Federal Guidelines.

The postponement, according to the President, "will enable the States to operate day care programs for more than a year free of onerous and costly Federal intrusion, while HEW completes a required major study and reports with recommendations on the day care standards. In addition, the Congress will have the opportunity to act on my proposed Federal Assistance for Community Services Act', submitted to the Congress last February to reform the Title XX social services program.

The President said his proposal would allow the States to administer the Title XX program with flexibility, simplification and added responsiveness to the needs of citizens.

In a different area, H.R. 12455 allows older Americans as well as families who qualify for Federally-assisted social services to obtain those services without having to submit to what President Ford labelled "a demeaning scrutiny of their personal affairs."
